Countrystyle takes the Lead in Reducing Fire Risk

As part of Countrystyle's application to amend its waste wood processing permit at its site at Ridham Sea Terminals, Countrystyle has invested heavily in ensuring that its new processed wood storage area follows the guidance issued by the Environment Agency (TGN7.01) and the WISH Forum on reducing fire risk at Waste and Recycling Sites.

Storage bunkers constructed from fire resistant concrete blocks are being erected on a dedicated 2 acre site, which will incorporate an integrated fire and dust suppression system as well as stockpile temperature and integrated CCTV monitoring capability.

As part of its extensive planning and consultation process prior to submission, Countrystyle obtained prior approval to its integrated fire management system from Kent Fire & Rescue Service. Stuart Butler-Gallie, Director of Legal & Admin, said "the approach taken by the Company, as a key player in the waste wood processing market, to planning future investment in its processes, demonstrates our commitment to being at the forefront of compliance in a difficult operating environment."

Alex Bardsley

Account Manager (Local Authorities)

What is your biggest achievement in your working life? Being a key member of a small team working on a project which resulted in winning a contract for supplying glass for The Shard. I was responsible for planning the delivery schedule to meet customer's needs.

What do you wish you had invented? Google. It is a relatively simple concept and a great tool used throughout the world, and I also think it is amazing a company brand name is officially a verb in the Oxford English Dictionary.

If you weren't in waste, what would you want to be? A travel journalist. I enjoy visiting new places and this would be a great way to do this.

What aspect of your job do you enjoy the most? Being able to meet and work with a variety of people from different companies; all of whom pose different challenges and have different expectations.

Stuart Markham

Environmental & Planning Manager

What is your biggest achievement in your working life? Developing and overseeing the construction of the world's first wind turbine that floats on landfilled waste.

What do you wish you had invented? Instant Coffee – I love a good cup of Coffee but can't stand instant, I'm convinced I could have done a better job.

If you weren't in waste, what would you want to be? A tree surgeon – I love being outside and enjoy working with timber, so an ideal combination.

What aspect of your job do you enjoy the most? The problem solving, whatever is thrown at me can usually be resolved and often the simplest solution is the most effective but working that bit out is the fun part.
